

Acknowledgements

I would like to acknowledge the many contributions of my friends, colleagues, and family, without which the completion of these course notes would never have been possible.

Craig Watkins, whose efforts have contributed to all aspect of these course notes, especially to the appendices of various chapters, and to the celestial mechanics chapter in particular.

John Belcher, for his tireless efforts in improving undergraduate education at MIT, especially by creating the TEAL (Technology Enabled Active Learning) program for first-year physics students at MIT.

Thomas Greytak, for his dedication both in the classroom and to improving physics education at MIT. His presentations of mechanics were an inspiration for many parts of these course notes.

Deepto Chakrabarty, for our many discussions prompted by his insightful understanding of classical mechanics.

Andy Neely, and his years of devotion towards making TEAL work.

Camille Dourmashkin-Cagol, for her painting, “Beethoven’s Pathétique No. 1,” on the front and back cover of this book.

I am eternally grateful to the Physics Department at MIT, especially Edwin Bertschinger, for his devotion to undergraduate education.

I would also like to thank the following people for their contributions to TEAL and to the development of these course notes: Sen-Ben Liao, Sahana Murthy, Saif Rayyan, Eric Mazur, Daniel Kleppner, Marin Soljačić, David Pritchard, Eric Hudson, Enectali Figueroa-Feliciano, Joseph Formaggio, Jeff Gore, Christoph Paus, Marcus Klute, David Litster, Alan Guth, Walter Lewin, Matthew Strafuss, Daniel Kelleher, Nancy Savioli, Nancy Boyce, and Catherine Modica.

And finally, I would like to thank my wife, Dorothea, and my two daughters, Clarissa and Camille, for their patience and understanding.

